Comments

From the USA

"The downturn struck harder and sooner in the US than it did in Europe, but clearly the US tech sector had a lot further to fall. Likewise, the recovery appeared to take a real hold some 6 months sooner in the US than it did in Europe. However, it feels like there is now a return to 'normality' in the US technology market. After three difficult years, investors are looking to do deals and the degree of confidence of both investors and their portfolio businesses has risen noticeably.

As these figures that we have compiled in the Calibre One Index clearly demonstrate, the US tech sector is of a different order of magnitude than it is in Europe. In my view US investors certainly are more 'risk tolerant' than their European counterparts. US VCs understand fully that a number of their investments will fail, but if they do fail it will be for reasons other than a lack of investment, or due to lack of focus because the CEO had to spend too much time fundraising. This is elegantly evidenced by the far larger average deal size in the US – c. $11M as opposed to c. $6M in Europe.

California itself is one of the world's largest economies and it has spawned many of the world's leading technology businesses and VC investors. There is a degree of confidence in the US, and on the West Coast in particular, that just doesn't exist anywhere else. Nowhere can the adage 'success breeds success' be more accurate. Executives in the US certainly have an ingrained appreciation of 'what good looks like'. This is one of the reasons that we are increasingly being asked to seek talented US Executives for CEO roles in European based technology businesses. It's something we have always done and we predict that this will become an even more significant part of our business in the coming years."

From Europe

"For me, the most striking feature of this data is just the sheer difference in size between the US and the other markets. Prior to collecting this data we all knew that the US was far and away the leader in technology and in VC investment in technology, but what surprised me was just by how much. In the first three quarters of 2004 c. $9.1Bn was invested in technology ventures in the US and c. $0.54Bn in my home market, the UK. In stark terms UK tech investors deployed only 6% of the capital of their US counterparts.

This difference in scale was brought home to me recently when one of our US based clients asked us to conduct some research into VC backed software companies in the Chicago area because they 'couldn't think of any'. I asked our research teams to investigate and they discovered that in Illinois in excess of $500M of VC funding has gone into technology businesses in the first three quarters of 2004 putting Illinois alone on a par with the UK.

The sheer volume of investment aside, the other very significant statistic is the average size of the deals, which in the US is around double that of Europe at around $11M. Data on average valuations agreed at first and second round would be very enlightening but we are unlikely to be able to compile this for obvious reasons! However, looking at the data we have been able to collect, it is obvious that the US is out on its own as the place to build technology businesses. It is an unfortunate fact that the majority of European based technology businesses in their 'start-up' phase that have developed great technology with a compelling customer proposition have already started making plans to move to the US lured by the much larger market for their products and the far greater potential returns of a US trade-sale or IPO. It is difficult to envisage how this is anything but a long-term trend."

Setting the standard

With offices in London and San Francisco, Calibre One is the world's leading executive search organisation dedicated to working with high-growth technology businesses and their investors, to find outstanding talent to help them realise their true value.

Our 'no stone left unturned' approach to each assignment produces results that consistently surpass our competitors. This has enabled us to build partnerships with the world's leading private equity investors and their portfolio companies across the world.

Executive search

Never before has the effective and efficient recruitment of senior managers been more of a mission critical undertaking. A successful technology company is built on three core pillars of value – the technology (IP), the balance sheet and the quality of the team.

We help our partners to achieve their business objectives through managing the effective recruitment and retention of great people on their behalf.

We measure our success in client terms, not our own. Completing an assignment is only the start. The real measure of success of any Executive placement is the improved performance of the business. With this in mind, Calibre One provides the most comprehensive guarantee in the market. Should we recruit a candidate who does not work out in their first year, for whatever reason, then we will undertake to manage the assignment again for no additional fee.

In this way our success is inextricably linked to the success of our clients.

Interim management

Calibre One Interim is a leading Interim Management provider. It manages a hand-picked network of highly skilled and experienced executives all of whom have been subjected to a rigorous assessment and referencing process before being accepted onto the register.

Whether it's a spin-out, strategic review, special project, aggressive expansion or a turnaround, Calibre One Interim can be trusted to deliver outstanding interim management solutions in record time.
